Forensic Director

Description

For additional information and the full Microsite, visit: <https://kudusearch.careers/forths/>

If you are already the person colleagues turn to for Personal Injury cases, the one who can unpick complex losses, explain the numbers with clarity, and stand up to scrutiny, this is an opportunity to specialise fully and work at the very top of the injury market.

Established in 2002, the firm has evolved from an ambitious MBO into a market-leading authority, trusted by solicitors, insurers, and the courts alike. As a key part of the Frenkel Topping Group, Forths is entering an exciting phase of private equity ownership. This is a shift designed to fuel a strategy that offers significant further investment, stability, and opportunity.

However, despite this corporate strength, Forths remains true to its roots. There are no ivory towers here and no complex hierarchies; just a team of 40 exceptional professionals who are down-to-earth, collegiate, and driven by quality.

The Opportunity

Due to sustained organic demand, Forths is looking to appoint a Forensic Director to join their senior team.

This is a rare opportunity for a high-calibre professional to specialize entirely in Personal Injury (PI) and Clinical Negligence work at the highest level. You will be dealing with complex, high-value cases (often exceeding £500k), engaging with cutting-edge case law, and acting as the “market arbiter.”

The firm’s reputation for neutrality and rigour means they are frequently appointed as the “Single Joint Expert”: a testament to the trust placed in them by both claimant solicitors and major insurers.

The Role: Crafted Around You

We understand that forensic experts come with different motivations. As such, Forths is open to shaping this role around the strengths of the individual:

The Subject Matter Expert: If your passion lies in the intellectual challenge of the work (crunching the complex numbers, navigating technical nuances, and mentoring a team) this role offers a pure, high-quality caseload of the best work in the UK market. You can focus on delivery, quality, and technical excellence without the pressure of “sales”.

The Market Facing Leader: Alternatively, if you possess the commercial drive to build relationships and widen the firm’s footprint, this role can offer the platform to do so. You will have the autonomy to drive your own portfolio, opening doors in new sectors and solidifying relationships with key stakeholders across the UK.

The Candidate

You will preferably be a qualified accountant (ACA, ACCA) with significant experience in forensic accounting.

Crucially, you must have exposure to Personal Injury work. You may currently be working within a large accounting practice, recognised internally as the “go-to” person for PI cases when they arise, but frustrated that you cannot specialise fully due to the firm's broader focus. Alternatively, you may be in a boutique firm seeking a platform with greater resources and higher-profile instructions. Either way, we want you to grow within our team and the market, signing reports and developing your own profile as a named expert.

Whether you are a technical purist seeking a home for your expertise or commercially minded with a desire to develop business alongside core forensic work, Forths offers a unique environment. You will be joining a business where the work is self-sustaining, the reputation is impeccable, and the future is heavily invested in.
